

Annex M: Public Consultation and Disclosure Events

This annex summarises all the local, national, regional and international public consultation and disclosure activities for the Project to date.

Summary of Local Events

Local-level participation has required attention to the presentation of appropriate information through various formats, including village meetings and focus groups. PCPP teams of local Lao people have been established and trained in PRA techniques to facilitate a flow of information from stakeholders. Each team's membership represents a diversity of socio-economic, cultural, gender, and generational perspectives. The approach was designed to ensure a clear understanding of the cultural and livelihood implications of the Project and to ensure that stakeholders were involved in Project planning. In all cases, villagers were notified prior to the arrival of the public consultation team.

The first stages were coordinated by a NTPC consultant responsible for training, planning and reporting on consultation activities on the Plateau. The RMU had overall responsibility for carrying out the PCPP, while international experts continued to advise on local community participation techniques and reporting. All surveys and visits included presentation and interactive discussions, graphic representation including maps and, in the case of the Nakai Plateau, visits to the demonstration farm.

Table M.1 presents a summary of the local-level consultations undertaken to date for the Nakai Plateau and downstream areas. Further details on the methodology used for local-level PCPP are presented in the SDP.

Regional and National Participation to Date

At the regional level, PCPP has enabled an exchange of information between NTPC representatives, GOL, and regional stakeholders - that is community leaders, district agencies, provincial agencies, BPKP and local businesses and contractors. These activities have been held in the district and provincial centres. These meetings and workshops disseminated information as it became available from commissioned studies, and provided a forum for discussion of issues, and concerns raised as a result. In particular, the regional programme provides an additional channel for communicating villagers' concerns identified at the local level to the regional stakeholders and interested parties.

National PCPP has involved an intensive programme of information briefings and workshops in Vientiane since May 1996, with STEA being responsible for overseeing the proceedings. These events have largely focused on dissemination of information and responses to three GOL commissioned studies i) Study of Alternatives, ii) Economic Analysis, and iii) the Nakai-Nam Theun NBCA Management Plan (predecessor to the SEMFOP), as well as the safeguard documentation of the EAMP and the RAP. To further facilitate accessibility to information, an NT2 Public Information Centre was opened in the STEA office, Vientiane, in March 1997.

A summary of regional and national events is presented in Tables N.2 and N.3 respectively.

International Level Participation to Date

National workshops and information briefings have also addressed many of the needs of the international stakeholders. Participation by international media in the national consultation programme, together with the local representation of many international NGOs and international aid and development organisations, has ensured the Project a place in the international arena. Project representatives have attended or participated in numerous conferences addressing international issues related to the Project (Table M.4).
